WE learn that Dr. S. P. Townsend has sold out the good will of his Sarsaparilla business, including machinery and raw material on hand, for the large sum of $100,000.— This is an illustration of the advantages and benefits of advertising. The purchasers are Messrs. Nostrand & Bach, both wealthy and well known individuals. They have, we understand, employed the celebrated Chemist, Dr. James R. Chilton, who will hereafter have the compounding department under his own immediate supervision. They are men of enterprise, and will, no doubt, sustain the character of this celebrated medicine, which has the reputation of being the celebrated medicine, which has the reputation of being the best preparation of Sarsaparilla made in the United States. The new proprietors, we understand, warrant their article to stand in all climates any length of time, which we have no doubt of, when manufactured by so practical a chemist as Professor Chilton, who is well known to be one of the first chemists in this country. chemists in this country.

The public are hereby notified that the preparation extensively known as Dr. S. P. Townsend's Compound Extract of Sarsaparilla, is now manufactured under my direction and supervision, from the original enterpe obtained from Dr. S. P. Townsend, and I certify that it is composed of ingredients purely vegetable, and without Mercury—and also that the ingredients are judiciously compounded, so as to obtain from them their greatest medicinal effects.

A vast trial of its virtues throughout this broad country, has proven beyond a doubt that no medicine or combination of medicines yet known can so surely control and cure the numerous varieties of pulmonary disease which have hitherto swept from our midst thousands and thousands every year. Indeed, there is now abundant reason to believe a remedy has at length been found which can be relied on to cure the most dangerous affections of the lungs. Our space here will not permit us to publish any proportion of the cures affected by its use, but we would present the following opinions of eminent men, and refer further enquiry to the circular which the Agent below name I will always be pleased to furnish free, wherein are full particulars and indisputable proof of these facts.

From the President of Amherst College, the celebrated Professor Hitchcock.

"James C. Ayer—Sir: I have used your Cherry Pectoral in my own case of deep-seated Bronchitls, and am satisfied from its chemical constitution, that it is an admirable compound for the relief of laryngial and bronchial difficulties. If my opinion as to its superior character can be of any service, you are at liberty to use it as you think proper.

As a part of the history of the times, we have thought proper to publish the address and resolutions adopted by the late State Rights Convention, which assembled at Charleston; and also, the letter of Langdon Cheves, giving his views upon the question of immediate secession and other subjects.

It is proper to remark, that this Convention possessed no official character, nor any authority or influence, apart from what it might derive from the character and standing of its members, and the presumption that they might be supposed to express public opinion throughout the State of South Carolina. The example of the Nashville Convention, which is now all but forgotten, might have shown the total inefficiency if such assemblages. PLANTATION, (Ogeechee,) 1st May, 1851.

My Dear Sir—I have been appointed a Delegate f the Southern Rights Association of St. Philip's and St. Michael's, and also of the Indian Land Ass ciation, of York District, to the Convention to be held bedience to these calls, but I cannot do so without which admit of no delay, and which cannot be well accomplished without my personal attention. This business, however pressing and important, should have been superseded by the public call if I could have believed that my attendance at the Convention could be of any material importance, but I am well satisfied that it could not. My general views of the grievances of the South, and of the subversion of the South, and of the subversion of the Constitution of the United States are fully known to onstitution of the United States, are fully known to the public, and will weigh for what they are worth as effectually as if I were again to declare them .-The object of the Convention, I understand to be, to decide whether, in the opinion of the Convention, South Carolina ought to secede from the Union aone and without the concurrent action of any of the other Southern States. My opinion on the propriety of the separate action of one Southern State, and particularly of South Carolina, has been long known. There is no man in the country who feels more sen sibly than I do the danger, the dishonor, the infamy of the condition of the South. No man is more entirely convinced of the justice, the Constitutional right, and the political expediency of the withdrawal of the Southern States from the Union by which they are enthralled, and which cannot fail, while it subsists, to bring on them further and future dan- elected. ger, oppression, and infamy. I am satisfied that history furnishes no example of such disputable sub nission as that which they now exhibit. The phi losophy of liberty is jealousy. The proper action of patriotism is the earliest possible resistance to the slightest encroachment on the public rights. The overs of liberty snuff the tainted breeze of tyranny in the distant gale, and do not wait for the over whelming power of the storm. But we tamely enlure the full blast of the injuries and insults so profusely poured upon us. We hug our chains with something approaching to fondness, and submit to be governed by our bitter enemies—and yet it is only necessary to will it, to rend those chains and to ed, regenerated, and disenthralled!" As a citizen of the South, I feel humiliated into the very dust. Yet, I am not of opinion that South Carolina should secede alone. Nor do I think thus on account of the dangers it may provoke, or the sacrifices it too great in such a cause. But one State of the ly our sister town of Fayetteville. We think a re-States. These States form one family in interest, in blood, in feeling, and in endearing, social and historical relations and recollections, and such ties ought not to be broken but by dire necessity. South Carolina, I know, has been grossly slandered and villified such feelings of jeelousy for what no dispassionate man can say is rash or unwise. She has done no more than proclaim the Southern wrongs, and who can deny them, and to express a desire to unite with her sister States in re- doubt please the ladies. The price of the "Book" is sisting them. She will be wrong, however, in my poor opinion, if she separates alone from them in her measures of resistance. But it may be said they have not proposed to do what the honor and interest of all require to be done to redeem the character and to sustain the rights of the South. It is most true. and deeply to be lamented, but we are but one member of this large family, and have no right to dictate authoritatively to the other members of the family We must wait upon them and entreat them to move.

The Democratic party once already, under the guidance of Jefferson in 1798, saved the South from the ambition and toils of Federalism.—

The leading Federalists were then high, honorable, able men, who were ambitious then high, honorable, able men, who were ambitious then high, honorable, ambition was noble, and show the second the negro girl asleep, and the child therefore scarce a crime, though dangerous to the true principles of our Union. These men have gone down to the grave, or have been proscribed and discarded by their unworthy associates, men with more than their ambition but none of their virtues or talents. The object of the old Federalists was a strong but honest Government. That of their successors is an anarchical tyranny, regardless of the provisions ting fit. We look upon this event as one of the of the constitution for the security of Southern rights | many that are singularly controlled by the goodness and animated by the principles of abolition and the of God-and trust that it will serve as a caution to

The report made at the last meeting of the stockholders of this company, states that the charters of the company, granted by Virginia and North Carolina, are of the most liberal character. The road is remarkably free from curvature. The gradients are very low. In one or two places only, and for very short distances, they are as high as 25 feet to the mile. For practical purposes, it may almost be regarded as a straight and level road. The capital stock is one million of dollars, which may be increased to one and a half millions, at the pleasure of the company. The entire road, ninety miles in length, will not cost the present company over one million of dollars. This will include the entire relaying of the track, with T rail, the road way, the full equipment of cars and engines, the buildings, shops, wharves, &c., necessary for the business of the road. The road is now, (March, 1851,) laid in the most substantial manner, and in daily operation both for passengers and freight, to Franklin, on the Blackwaer river, a distance of 371 miles. The iron rails are provided and on hand for the whole length of the line, and an efficient force is now engaged in laying the track between Franklin and Weldon. The length now laid is about 45 miles from Portsmouth. The road will probably be opened to Weldon, 80 miles from Norfolk, in May next, and to South Gaston, in season for the fall crop. The estimate for the receipts have been made, after a good deal of examination into the subject, and from many detailed statements from persons familiar with the great resources of the Roanoke valley. A large amount of tobacco, cotton, corn, lumber, naval stores, flour, pork, &c.. will find their best mar-ket at Norfolk, and the supply of West India goods and other articles consumed in the interior, will be transmitted in return. The annexed map traces the great Northern and Southern route via Norfolk, and the route to the Mississippi. From Norfolk the distance to New Orthe aggregate is 1,345 miles, capable of being traveled in four days. The route is divided as follows: Norfolk to Weldon, by railroad, 83 miles; Weldon to Wilmington, 161; Wilmington to Manto Atlanta 171: Atlanta to West Point, 85; West Point to Montgomery, 97; Montgomery to Mobile, by steamboat 327; Mobile to New Orleans, 150-1.345 miles-from New York to Norfolk, 284-from New

They desired to act, because they believed that safety and honor required action; but they hoped that they might find leaders in other they might follow in defence of the bling of a southern Congress to devise measures of the injured.

A certain man once married a lady whose repunctation for amiability of disposition was seriously questioned, if it was not in reality questionable. At the weading everything went off merrily, of course. The weading everything went off merrily, of course. The bling of a southern Congress to devise measures of whole affair had been eminently successful, and all purpose of endeavoring to unite the southern States evitable ruin to follow submiss of Mississippi, by providing for the election of dele-taining redress for the past and security for the future, without a dissolution of the existing Union, if there be a possibility of such a consumation.

But we find ourselves forced to consider the ulterior question, what we are to do if we find that there is no reasonable hope of the co-operation of any other southern State in any effectual plan of relief, and Report and Resolutions of the Minority of the Committee. the alternative is presented to us of submitting or acting by ourselves? And, reluctant as we are to separate ourselves from our natural friends and allies, we have made up our minds—we cannot submit. If no other ed so as to read as follows: State will join us in relieving ourselves from the wrongs already inflicted, we see no hope in waiting for new outrages to arouse a higher spirit of resis-

The new outrages, we are well convinced, will come in due time; but we feel no assurance that the spirit of the vassal will rise in proportion to the in-dignities heaped upon his head. On the contrary, we see that the South has already borne what it would not for a moment have submitted to ten years ago, and what the North would not then have ventured to perpetrate. We are not willing to try the experiment how long it will be before our spirit is completely broken, by gradually and continually yielding to slow and gradual, but unceasing encroachments. And if the exercise of the right of secession is to be followed by the attempt on the part of the government of this confederacy to subjugate South Carolina, it is better that we should meet that attempt while we still have some spirit and some power of resistance left. If we are to submit to the condition of a conquered people, we think it less dishonorable not to do so until we have first been conquered. And if anything could add to the necessity which we believe exists for a withdrawal from the existing Union, it would be the denial of the right of secession; for the denial of that right indicates of secession; for the denial of that right indicates of itself extreme danger. The right of secession has heretofore, and in better days, been regarded as unquestionable by all southern politicians, with the exception of an inconsiderable number of consolidationists; and if ever that right can be denied without arousing the whole South to sustain it, the South will be ripe for the most miserable fate which has ever befallen any neonle. They will have no safeguard against the central government, strengthened by crushing opposition, and rendered by triumphant force what our little sketch, which is still preserved in the painter northern enemies have long been endeavoring to family: make it by fraudulent usurpation—the supreme government of a consolidated nation. The sovereignty of one southern State cannot be destroyed without the loss of their sovereignty by all the others. We are aware of the responsibility of doing an act which may hasten these consequences. We feel the respect which we owe to States having a common inter est, threatened by a common, danger, but not equally persuaded with ourselves of the necessity of ac tion. And nothing would induce us to take, with out their concurrence, a course which is to involve them in its consequences, but a thorough conviction of the necessity which urges us, and of our right to

Nor can we regard it as necessary any further to discuss the wrongs which have been inflicted on the southern States. They may be denied by those who shut their eyes to them, but you do not belong to that class. Southern and State-rights men may differ as to the necessity of exercising the right of secession at a particular time, on account of those wrongs. But as certain as the right exists, each State must possess the right of judging for herself as to the occasion and time for its exercise. If South Carolina decides that honor and safety require her to secede, she has the right to leave the confederacy peaceably and without molestation.

A Man and a Christian.

A poor parson was in the habit, of every Saturday, borrowing of a friend a five dollar note, this was invariably returned with wonderful punctuality, early every Monday morning. What astonished the lender more than all, was the singular fact that he was always repaid in the very same bill he lent. Being a very curious man this puzzled him amazingly. He felt sure that the parson could not want the money for house hold expenses, because the note was never changed. After a time he resolved to seize the first opportunity of begging for an explanation of so unaccountable a proceeding. Shortly after the parson himself came on Saturday evening, and asked for the loan of a ten dollar note. His friend seized the opportunity of demanding the solution of the mystery. After a pause, the borrower said:

PORT OF WILMINGTON! NORTH-CANOLINA.

RALKIGH, April 30, 1851.

THE President and Directors of the Literary Fund have resolved to distribute among the several Counties in the State, the sums mentioned in the following Schedule in part of the nett income of the Literary Fund the current year, for the support of Common Schools; the sum to be paid at the Treasury Department upon the application of persons properly authorized to receive the same.

In making out this Schedule, the Board have taken the census of 1850, as published in the newspapers, not having been able to get, in time, a strictly official statement of the population. Should the table prove in any respect inaccurate, the Board will correct it in the Full Distribution.

The Counties of Madison and Jackson will receive their portion of the distribution from the Counties from which they were respectively formed.

Ex officio Pres't Lit. Board.

> From the London Times, April 18. The Great Exhibition.

The Crystal Palace is now, for the second time, in its brief history, emerging from chaos. First, it struggled into architectural symmetry and propor-tions from piles of timber and iron, collected for its orderly construction. Its pillared aisles, its terraced elevations, and its mathematical details and outlines were all evolved from huge masses of materials, which at first sight seemed to defy arrangement. That conversion was executed with a speed and success which excited general astonishment. Armis of glaziers and painters surrounded the anatomy of the vast fabric with a vitrous covering and decorated the interior with brilliant and well chosen colors. The galleries were run up, the flooring of the basement laid, and the industrial world had its limits and divisions carefully determined. In this early stage of its existence, when forges occupied the centre aisle, when the ringing of hammers filled the ears, and everything seemed rough and unfinished, the Crystal Palace might be compared to a new creation—its foundations handly settled, its security doubted, vast unoccupied territories still remained to be peopled and wide fields of labor to be occupied. Human industry had found a world to inhabit, but it had not yet taken possession. In that state of matters a deluge of packing cases and contributors flowed in upon the building, and all was once more in confusion. Chaos seemed to have come again. For some time the task of arranging those vast piles of material was continued without much apparent effect. But new actors appeared on the scene. Every portion of the interior had its occupant. Nationalities became realised.--Each man put up a stall for his property, and the whole available area of the building was disposed of in an orderly manner. Now contributors begin in earnest to furnish and adorn their respective allotments. Having made every suitable arrangement for the change, they have commenced to cast their shells, and to come out like so many butterflies in their best and brightest colors. The transformation is a remarkable process; and we invite our readers, in order that they may understand it, to accompany us through the building. We promise not to drag them over every inch of those interminable passages, not to fatigue them by too minute a survey, but rather to take the most attractive points as far as these have become distinctly developed. There will be ample opportunity hereafter for a closer inspection of the entire display, but, in the meantime, and before the opening takes place, the chief features of probable interest are those only which it seems deirable to sketch.

The grouping and arrangement of statuary and industrial trophies in the transept and along the centre aisle now approach completion, and, on the whole, promise to be most effective. Thornycroft's equestrian representation of Her Majesty still retains its prominent position in front of the main entrance, a position unfortunate for the character of British art, and still more so for the reputation of the artist, but which respect for the subject appears to render unavoidable. Other specimens of sculpture, possessing, with one or two exceptions, no very extraordinary merit, fill up the space towards the cen-tre of the transept, where, within a species of cover-ed tent, workmen are busily engaged in constructing the great crystal fountain. Luxuriating in the pleasant coolness likely to be caused by the vicinity of this object stand the colossal statues of the Duke of Rutland and Dr. Jenner. His Grace, executed in bronze, stooms forward as if anxious to say something to somebody who is not visible; and the civilian, seated in a ponderous easy chair, reminds one strongly of that great fundamental law of matter, "that a body at rest will continue at rest." Mr. Owen Jones annears to have disposed these gigantic objects more with reference to the effect of large masses upon the eye in such a position than for any other reason They have placed near them groups and single figures representing classical and mythological subjects-among them a charming little statue of Puck, in which the tricky, frolicsome and fairy character of the elf are most happily bodied forth by the ar-

From the transept down the eastern half of the centre aisle the eye is carried over a perfect sea of empty packing cases. which, tumbled out of the different foreign compartments, are swept away rapidly to the end of the building, where they disappear in wagons. In the midst of this debris rise the organ and gigantic plaster statues of the French, the Austrian group of Mazeppa, their preperations for a magnificent stained glass widnow, the Amazon group from Berlin, the great lion from Bavaria, and the ance. For instance, opposite Belgium there is a pi steamers, and exhibited her in the Crystal Palace the blue mercurial color of which looks very odd .- ther development of their portion of the Exhibition ing erect in their packing cases, as if loth to leave to a sufficient length, we reserve for another occa that shelter and attract public observation. The last object which catches the eye towards the eastern end of the nave is the legs and lower half of a human figure, apparently making every effort to escape from the building. term, are "located" in the nave, there are others which have a temporary usufruct of it, and which must not be omitted in any description applicable to the present state of the interior. Yesterday a artillery, drums, bugles; but good God! why dwell to the present state of the interior. Yesterday a bronze lion, the paws of which were turned out like a dancing master's feet, loitered about one of the entrances to the French compartment, as if there was some doubt about the safety of admitting it. Another foreign division barely sheltered within its hoarding a very fierce looking panther or tiger, we cannot undertake to say which. Germany appears to share the apprehensions of the New York Herald as to a revolution in England this year, or she dreads eneroachment in some shape, with Russia on one side and Austria on the other. She now exhibits at side and Austria on the other. She now exhibits at ing individuals difficult, and in some cases impossible. one of the approaches to her compartments from the nave a formidable piece of artillery mounted and in gear for immediate service. France, judging of what we see of her in the centre aisle, is less bellicose, but still her political state is typified, for only the day Outside, lancer and curassier were scattered thick before yesterday a huge boiler was slowly moved on reliers from the west end of the building into her space. But, not to linger too long ourselves in the bootless essay, by the muskets of the inner files. attractive objects begin to appear.

The reader will pause with us for a moment beby Phydias and other great seulptors of ancient Greece. After being closed for many a century, they have recently been opened once more, and are expected to supply an article of extensive export. they have recently been opened once more, and are expected to supply an article of extensive export.—
Nature still yields the raw material, but the genius which could fashion it is gone, and now, except that cumbered with dead and trodden fetlock deep in mud block, which two men are sawing into slabs in order and gore, by the frequent rush of rival cavalry, the to show its quality, hardly anything worth mention has been sent from the land where art, and science, and literature, drew their earliest and some of their loftiest inspirations. Italy will make a fairer show than Greece, though her department also suggests sorrowful reflections. The specimens of wood carv-by a mass of fallen Frenchmen. ing and ornamental furniture from Tuscany are astonishingly fine, and strike the fancy, both from the remarkable and minute delicacy of execution, and the middle battallions had been forced back, attemptrom the perfect harmony of the general design.— There is a jewel case in this collection which is a perfect gem itself, whatever it may contain. These specimens of carving come principally from Florence. Rome sends, as its choicest contributions, ome splendid mosaics, the execution and finish of which make them hardly distinguishable, except on which make them hardly distinguishable, except on minute examination, from elaborate oil paintings. Three of these will attract great attention. Two represent an evening and morning view of an ancient temple, and the third is the head of St. John after ne of the ancient masters.

Of the French exhibition, the only portion which as yet makes a prominent display is the collection of bronzes, which are executed with surprising spirit and taste. The Elkington process of electropating has been used in this department with the most brilliant results. Never were knights seen more splendidly armed or mounted upon more high-mettled chargers. The Duke of Wellington has passed not only without injury, but even with a visible desire to improve his personnel, through the hands of a to improve his personnel, through the hands of a French artist. He is no longer the "Iron Duke," but a hero of nobler metal, and "Copenhagen" prances on the verge of a rock a mass of shining silver. Napoleon receives no greater honor or distinction from the artist's hands, and an equestrian statue of him which figures opposite the Duke is executed in precisely the same style. The Duke examined the representation of himself a day or two ago, when he was making the round of the building and expressed himself much pleased with it.

But, besides the warriors of the present age, those of times past are also remembered. Buckingham, Bayard, and other knights of chivalric renown, furnish subjects, and when the authentic characters of mediæval warfare are exhausted, the imaginary heroes of troubadour lore and poetic tale are introduced. Knights with gorgeous helmets and armour, elaborately chiselled, recline in the most graceful attitudes upon clocks which are marvels of gilding and ornament; damsels, splendidly attired, ride forth up-The martial spirit and the on nimble palfreys. showy equipments of generations that have long passed away are reproduced in miniature for the decoration of our apartments, and we, the wearers of broadcloth, who clothe ourselves in garments of sombre hue and hats of unsightly proportions, are thught to wonder at the changes which time and fashion create in the habiliments and pursuits of man. The Austrian display of furniture will be regarded by all with feelings of unalloyed satisfaction The admiration which it excites increases every day, although the arrangement of the suite of rooms i not more than half completed.

But a new attraction has arisen in the sculpture room of the collection. The works of art exhibited therein come almost entirely from Milen, and the credit of them belongs therefor to Italy rather than Austria. It does affect the mind with some painful emotions, and some regret for a country to which Europe owes so much, to see her genius in art, which is her chief glory, thus appropriated with her territory by conquest. No one can enter the sculp-ture room, and see the extraordinary merit of some of the works which it contains, without a sorrowful feeling and some sense of injustice. There is in the collection a figure of Ishmael in marble, which will. we are confident, be pronounced a masterpiece of art. The expression of exhaustion on the face of the boy—the attenuation of his frame, and the lan-guid, powerless character imparted to his limbs by erful nation. It is scarcely credible that so small a the manner in which they are disposed, all speak the manner in which they are disposed, and speak their own story. There are several other works of great merit, especially one which represents an Italian matron teaching her child for the first time to with and indifference which has become a matter

The German display begins now, like those other countries, to disclose peculiar and attractive features. Of these, the most remarkable is a collection of the countries, to disclose peculiar and attractive features. tion of stuffed animals and birds, grouped so as to represent scenes from nature, to reproduce in actual form some of Sneyder's most celebrated pictures, and important question. to bring out the humorous fables of the Rheineike Fuchs, a very old work. and one of the first books printed in English by the Caxtons. The whole of this collection, which comes from Stuttgard, will be examined by the public with extreme interest and amusement. There is a group of owls protecting their young against two weazels. There is also a battue of diminutive hares or rabbits by a large party of circumventing weazels. By an arrival at Boston, we have had accounts from Hayti which assure us that the black emperor, Soulouqua, has persisted in refusing to heed the claim made upon him by our government, with respect to the detention of the brig Leander and the vation. mprisonment of her captain; and, also that the proosition made by our government for the indepen lence of the Dominicans—the Spanish portion of the island—has been rejected by the chamber of Deputies. Besides this information, we learn that tyranny of the black emperor knows no bounds, and that suspected persons are executed with a bar-barous haste, disgraceful in this era of Christianity. In fact, we learn but little of the many acts of heart less tyranny of this Faustin the First, who treats last year we have known enough to authorize the government to teach his black majesty that he must monarch should it sult our country as he has done notorious throughout the world. The spirit of the Caucasian race once more exerted upon the soil of St. Domingo, would bring forth abundant fruits, and restore one of the gardens of the world to the position, in the world, for which it was destined by Providence. While such a spot exists, subject to the monstrous tyranny of ignorance, it cannot be viewed with indifference; and we have no doubt, as it is perfectly legal to emigrate thither, that in view able a method as that contained in a sketch from the of the insolence which has characterised the Emperor of Hayti, there will be found numerous adveninfluence towards bringing it back to the state of its former prosperity. It cannot be that ignorance and to interfere with those who may be disposed to direct their sympathies towards the restoration of that country to its former commercial importance. The Spanish population, at one end of the island, have long been connected with our merchants in the diminishing trade existing between the standard and the scrunched down mity hard, but it warn't minishing trade existing between both parties, and minishing trade existing between both parties, and it is quite right that they should take any steps which will protect the Dominicans from future threats of aggression, or from hostilities which may arise on the part of the black Emperor, from his jealousy of the Spanish population. One thing is certain—that St. Domingo is destined at no very distant day, to come under a government equal to the character of its agricultural resources and to the character of its agricultural resources, and to its geographical position, which are highly favorable io the formation of a republic that will command the admiration of the world .- N. It would seem that, to use guano now would not be an experiment, as in almost, indeed I may say in every county where is evinced a spirit of agricultural improvement, it has miles from town, and stroll in the woods, bathe in the creek, search the orchard and the hen nests, and been tested, and unlike the "new broom" that loses its qualities by using, the longer it is used the more satisfactory are its results.

The high price at which it was held last fall, frightened some out of the use of it who were advocates for it, while others who paid $60 per ton contact the creek, search the orenard and the hen hests, and turn everything about the premises up-side down.—

And old Souire Parish would sit in his chimney corner, pipe in mouth, and tell them stories about the first settlement of the country, and how "Old Hickory" whipped the Indians—for the old Squire had been in Jackson's army—and never let the boys off cates for it, while others who paid $60 per ton con-grown in the Eastern and Middle States. The better to test its utility on wheat, spaces have been left with no guano.

Some sixteen winters—rode up to the Squire's door and hailed the house. His summons was answered by that black young rascal Josh, who told Jones that the boys were gone squirrel hunting; "but you bet-ter believe, Mass Bill," continued Josh, "that the ood is more luxuriant and much in advance of that on the spaces which exhibit but little verdure.

A few weeks since, in company with Amerose Ford, of Cumberland county, Va., I visited a wheat that the girls had gone to their usual bathing place.

Ford, of Cumberland county, Va., I visited a wheat field of his upon which an experiment as above had been made. The difference between the spaces and of the guanced wheat was very visible, sufficiently so to elicit the enquiry, why those barren places?

Mr. Ford estimates the products of the guanced wheat at 11 bushels, and the spaces at 3 bushels per acre.

Guano has been so extensively and thoroughly tested, that we may suppose its character as a fertilizer fully established and appreciated. And yet there are those who are skeptical on the subject, for whose benefit I give the results of a few of the experiments that have recently fallen under my observation. bathing place, it commenced floating towards the shore until within a few yards of the bathers, when it drifted against a limb which overhung the stream and lodged. If Jones had looked through the loopholes, (he swears he didn't) he would have seen a sight that would have made the gourd itself blush. On one rock were three or four swimmers, alternatewould say "chug!" they would all plunge into the water, frog fashion. At another place they were striving to duck each other: while a third party was leading by force, into the water, a coy damsel, had been too modest to undress before so many folks. But Jones's gourd did not long remain unnotice the water, and the damsel who espied it, sailed up to it, seized it, and with slight resistance it came off, other bathers rushed up the bank, and Jones, in his fright and confusion, followed them. Here the girls turned on him, seized him, and threw him on his face, twined his arms around a sapling, and having bound his hands with a kerchief, Jones lay defenceless in the power of his captors. The girls now leisurely dressed themselves, and then each provided herself with a trim birch or willow rod, and, without further ceremony, began applying them to the sides, and legs of poor Jones. Jones twisted, and Jones writhed, he drew himself up, and he spread himself out; he begged and he prayed. But in vain. His captors were insensible to pity, until their arms were fatigued, and their rods frayed into ribbons. Alas, for poor Jones; he was not yet to escape. His tormentors provided themselves with fresh instruments, and stationed themselves in a row along the footnath from Jones's tree to the water's-edge, and, on the rock from which he was to plunge, was posted a stout country lass, whose strength he had often Without stopping to see any more of his fair friends, Jones hastened to aunt Judy's cottage, dressed himself, gave Josh a thorough kicking, borrowed a sheep-skin from aunt Judy, mounted his horse, and rode slowly back into town. And, from that day to this, Bill Jones has never shown his face, nor any other part of him, in good old Squire Parish's house, nor the stream that runs by its door.
